for sports tournaments and performing arts showcases. By noting these venue dates early—often listed on the district’s event calendar—parents can arrange transportation, volunteer shifts, and post-event meals, turning what could be a logistical scramble into a seamless family experience. Charlotte’s spring can bring sudden thunderstorms, while winter may produce icy road conditions. The district issues closures via text alerts and its online portal, usually 30–45 minutes before dismissal. Parents who to both channels receive redundant notifications, minimizing the risk of a child being left unattended at school. As a precaution, keep a “weather kit” in the car (blanket, water, snack) for unexpected early dismissals. Standardized assessments—state assessments, MAP testing, and end-of-grade exams—are clustered in March and May. Knowing these windows allows parents to schedule tutoring, allocate quiet study space, and adjust extracurricular intensity. A practical tip: set a weekly “test prep hour” two weeks before each window, focusing on practice items rather than full-length exams to avoid burnout. Charlotte’s rush hour peaks between 7:30–9:00 am and 4:30–6:00 pm. School start and end times often intersect with these windows, leading to longer commute times.
