Not every resident qualifies for the same amount, and not every year produces the same refund. The payback amount depends on how much surplus the state generates and how lawmakers choose to distribute it. In some years, residents receive a flat amount; in others, the refund scales with income or the number of qualifying dependents. To receive a Colorado state refund or payback, you generally need to meet the following conditions: Colorado residency: You must have been a legal resident of Colorado for at least part of the tax year in question. State tax filing: You need to file a Colorado state income tax return (Form 104). Even if your income falls below the federal filing threshold, filing a state return is often necessary to trigger a refund.
